fish before they find a profitable market. Since fish curing operations are conducted both by day and night, certain of the curers and their establishment prefer to live in the close vicinity of the yard. To afford such curers facilities for constructing sheds, part of the extra land available will be necessary. There is, in many cases, yard land outside the fenced portion which is available for use by curers whenever they want it and I believe it is customary to charge rent from curers for such occupation. Part of the land will also be necessary for the construction of staff quarters. As these quarters cannot be constructed very close to the yard, it is desirable that the land between the yard and the staff quarters should belong to the Fisheries Department.
